In May 2012, a unique “petition” was delivered to the doorstep of New York Governor Andrew Cuomo: A live concert of musicians, performers and scientists, aimed at persuading the governor to sustain his temporary moratorium on hydraulic fracturing, or hydrofracking. Dear Governor Cuomo is an all-access pass to this remarkable event – including passionate performances from artists including Natalie

Merchant, Pete Seeger and Medeski, Martin and Wood, and behind-the-scenes interviews with scientists and other influencers who have identified fracking as one of the most potentially dangerous environmental issues of our time. A dynamic convergence of the protest picture and the concert movie, Bowermaster's film educates as it entertains – and inspires the activist in us all.
